Tell how you have helped others by being a 4-H member. Share how you have used things learned in 4-H in school or in non 4-H activities. What has your 4-H project taught you?

Responsibility is demonstrated in my life through my participation in 4-H. I have been in 4-H for eight years, and my major project is keeping a dairy goat herd. For my project I must feed, hay, and water my animals. I also maintain the goats' hooves and monitor their health. I also oversee and manage the grain used on our farm for all of the animals: chickens, horse, dogs, cats, and goats. This responsibility entails figuring out how much grain each species consumes in one feeding each day. That amount is then multiplied by two to determine the amount per day. I then compute how much grain is needed on seven days. We purchase our grain in fifty pound bags. This requires me to convert the amount of consumed grain consumed in to the number of bags we need to purchase. My family does one grain order per week, so I need to make sure that I get enough grain to feed all the animals for that one week, while keeping within our budget. If I fail to do this responsibly, it can cost my family more money in gas and time spent purchasing additional grain.

My minor project in 4-H is Community Service. For this project I had to develop an idea that could benefit my club, my community, my country, or my world. Next I need to complete all the details of my idea. For example in October, my sister Hannah and I decide to donate pajamas to the Women's Center of Southeastern Connecticut. As we developed the idea we decided to throw a "pajama party". We also decided to not just donate pajamas, but to also raise money. Hannah took over the pajama aspect and I took on the raising money aspect. I went to people and businesses for monetary donations, and to other 4-H clubs to donate themed baskets for a basket raffle. We set the date for December 14 th . That evening we had 35 pajamas and sixteen baskets donated. We raised $366.00 for the Center.

This year, 4-H has taught me that a person can have fun and still contribute to their community and be responsible.
